

ABSTRACT

[0045] A mode switching method in a mobile communication system is provided. The method comprises providing a mode switching start point between an uplink signal and a downlink signal of a transceiver; resetting the mode
5 switching start point based on length of a guard period provided between the uplink signal and the downlink signal; and starting mode switching at the mode switching start point.